Principal's Message

If we would all attain the appropriate level of self-respect, have and show respect for all others, and live so others will respect us, the world would be a harmonious place to live.

Respect is a very powerful ingredient in how people – even total strangers – treat each other. If we could spread enough of it around, acts of respect could, in fact, change the world.

But obviously, human beings have inhabited this planet for many, many years and we have not gotten there yet. However, let's not give up hope. If each of us did our own respectful part, this peaceful condition could become a reality.

Maybe it could even begin with you. Why not try to start your own respect revolution by showing respect to yourself and respect others. What if, beginning with you, people started to make a pledge to respect each other as human beings first, and then to respect other people's genuine beliefs, views and opinions? What if you got out in front and lead us all on this important road of respect.

Are you willing to give it a try?
